Barber & Ross, Cor. Ith & G Sts. N. W. A CORNER TRANSFORMED.

A Magie Change Made by the Proprietor of the Palais Royal.

The transformation of the neighborhood reigned there up till the 1st of October to the bustle and activity of a business thoroughfare that prevails now tells more convincingly of the success of the New Palais Royal than the most eloquent words could. There have been folks who doubted the stability of the "G street boom," but this doubt is now gone, and it is an accomplished fact that the buying public has been taught to go from their accustomed channels of traffic to places where they can get what they want at the prices they want to pay. The streams of people radiating from this handsome new establishment show how much the people of Washington appreciate the energy, courage and public spirit of Mr. Lisner, the proprietor. At any time such an enterprise as the starting of a business on so large a scale as this requires a vast amount of pluck, but Mr. Lisner has that quality, and just at the beginning of the hard times that the country is now feeling so acutely bought his try is now feeling so acutely bought his ground and erected his building, so complete in its modern fittings, in spite of many gloomy predictions that real estate would fall in a short time; that soon there would be no money for buying either real estate or merchandise, and that he was foolhardy in not being content to stay in his smaller store. But these false prophets are discomfited. For in this, the hardest winter financially that has been known for years, when one of the leading New York houses has discharged 500 hands in December, the busiest month in the year.

York houses has discharged 500 hands in December, the busiest month in the year, and another that usually employs a force of 2,100 contents itself with one of 1,400, the Palais Royal is able to give work to 600 people, many of whom would otherwise be out of employment.

Meanwhile the vast emporium is delighting thousands daily with its beautiful goods, its great bargains and its novelties. The hunters of Christmas presents are finding there all they seek, and gifts for old and young, pretty, useful, in all grades of cost and all sorts of tastes. There is not a human desire that cannot be satisfied cost and all sorts of tastes. There is not a human desire that cannot be satisfied there. It is a veritable wonderland of good things. Provided with every convenience for customers, it is the usual thing that parties of shoppers go early in the morning to the Palais Royal and spend the entire day, leaving with reluctance in the evening when home duties compel them to leave. These facts are sufficient warrant for the popular belief that Mr. Lisner has made no mistake in taking his old custom up to G street and creating a new patronage in addition there. As an evidence both of his success and his charitable inclinations, which lead him to many acts of unostentatious giving, mention has recently been giving, mention has recently been of the fact that he sent to the Commissioners of the District, in addition to his usual liberal contributions, the sum of $425, or five per cent of one day's actual sales, to be used in relieving the poor of the city.

At present the Palais Royal is undoubtedly one of the most interesting points in the city. Aside from the rich and wonderful display of goods it is interesting to observe how the great business of a modern store is conducted. The establishment is fitted with elevators, pneumatic tubes for cash carriers and every device for expediting business and contributing to the comfort

The matter was referred to the committee on appropriations.

Albaugh's.-Thomas W. Keene gave an "Othello" at Albaugh's Grand Opera House last night. Not only were the star's efforts received with approval, but much satisfaction was expressed over the manner in which the subordinate members of the cast made the most of their opportunities for good work. The stage settings and the costuming were exceptionally good. The Princeton Glee Club.-The Princeton

Glee Club Concert last night at Metzerott Hall was one of the most successful enter-tainments of the sort ever given in this tainments of the sort ever given in this city, and drew together a large and stylish audience. It was the second concert of the holiday tour, the first being given in Baltimore on Tuesday evening. From here the club left by special train, in which they had every possible luxury, on a fortnight's trip through the south, giving concerts in all the leading cities as far as New Orleans, returning by way of Cincinnati and Buffalo to the Jersey college in time for the opening of the next term. From a musical point of view it would be hard to get up a better concert of the sort than that of last night. The combined organizations, the glee, banjo concert of the sort than that of last night. The combined organizations, the glee, banjo and mandolin clubs, number between fifty and sixty members. Each club showed evidences of thorough musical training, and the solo work was much better than the average. Mr. Teall and Mr. Colby gave special pleasure with their solos that of Mr. Teall being far above the average of amateur work. In the final number, "The Creole Love Song," the clubs united and the effect was as pretty as it could possibly be. The concert pretty as it could possibly be. The concert opened with the rendition of "Old Nassau," the song so dear to the heart of every Princeton alumnus, and which every man who has studied under the wide-spreading elms of this famous old institution has sung and learned to love. From then on there was a constant succession of good things, not all serious and not all comic, but a happy mixture of the two. happy mixture of the two. There were a number of excellent glees and medleys, and a topical song sung by Mr. Colby, called "The Romance Ends Right There," in which The Romance Ends Right There," in which reference was made to the Princeton-Yale foot ball game, was one of the big hits of the evening. Encores were numerous, and altogether the large and fashionable audi-Pythagoras Lodge, No. 9, F.A.A.M., at their annual election chose officers as follows: W. M., Bro. James O. Remenyl comes to us again laden with honor achieved from all over the world. This great violinist has held some of the most enviable of positions, having at one time been solo violinist to her majesty the Queen of England, and on leaving Eng-land for Austria was directly appointed to the same distinction by the emperor. He came to this country first in 1878 and has left and come back again a number of times. This year, however, he brings a new feature to his concerts, in his daughter, Miss Adrito his concerts, in his daughter, Miss Adrienne Remenyl, soprano, who has studied under the best of masters in Paris, and later stood the test before some of the best critics of Europe, and came off with colors flying in the highest honors. Mrs. Albright Fined. Yesterday afternoon in the Police Court after The Star's report closed, in the case of Mrs. Florine Albright, charged with using iodoform about her house, 1701 Q street, in order to get rid of Mr. Philip Brown, her subtenant, additional witnesses were sent for by the court and examined. Judge Miller summed up the testimony and said that the proof showed clearly Mrs. Albright's guilt. The offense, he said, was a serious one and deserved more than pass-ing notice. The judge said that in almost every case of this kind, where the landlord or landlady subjet the house and took board in part payment for rent, there was Mrs. Albright was fined $100 and costs and the court gave her until today to pay the

CHRISTMAS AND CLOTHING. How the Holidays Affect a Great Out-

String Establishment. The merry holiday air has pervaded even the great clothing establishments of this not held up in the Senate long. Being an city, for as the years go by people realize ex-cabinet officer he was treated with great more and more the sense of giving useful consideration, even though his selection for presents that will last and be of value all the important post of ambassador to Italy the time, instead of expensive trifles that disheartened many of the "regular" demoare admired, laid aside, and soon forgotten. crats. The committee on foreign relations As a result of this change that has come over the principles of Christmas giving agreed to pass the nomination to the Senate within the past few years, one of the liveliest business places in this city today is the great building of Baks & Co., at the northwest corner of 7th street and Market half an hour and the name was put through space. All day long the broad aisles of this mammoth establishment are crowded with people admiring the handsome stock of goods displayed. The way they spend their money there as well as their time would make it appear that there had been very considerable let up in the financial stringency. Christmas presents of all sorts, overcoats and suits of clothes, down to a silk umbrella or the latest agony in neckwear or hosiery, are exposed in attractive fashion before the eyes of the crowd.

Some years ago when Saks & Co. put up their big brick building that was, perhaps, the pioneer in the matter of size, people said that they had overestimated the capacity of the city and that it would be impossible to build up a trade appropriate to such a big structure. It is evident now, and has been for many a day gone by, that Saks & big structure. It is evident now, and has been for many a day gone by, that Saks & Co. builded wiser than the people knew, for by steady application to business and courteous, fair dealing with their customers, they long ago built up a trade that would not be anything but a credit to any store of the sort in any city in the country.

In conversation with a Star reporter yesterday Mr. I. Saks said that the secret of the success of their undertaking was easily to be found in their efforts to give satisfaction to every one who comes into the store. to be found in their enterts to give satisfac-tion to every one who comes into the store. This is a great thing in a business of such proportions, to draw people inside the doors. When they are once inside, if the goods that are displayed are to their liking, it is rea-sonably certain they will make a purchase of some sort before they so out. A crowd of some sort before they go out. A crowd that would make a smaller store seem lively and prosperous would easily be lost in such a big establishment as this. For this reason it is necessary to bring people in crowds, and large crowds at that.

It is a fact that is very gratifying to Saks & Company, and to every other Washingtonian, as showing that business prospects are more favorable, that the business done this season just prior to the holidays has been considerably larger even than that of last year. One reason for this, perhaps, is that Saks & Company have had for sale this December all the stock of the recently closed up Barnum business, which they have been selling with wonderful rapidity at 50 closed up Barnum business, which they have been selling with wonderful rapidity at 50 cents on the dollar. This fact, liberally advertised, has sufficed to draw people by the thousands, and when once there, even though they did not select any article from the Barnum stock, they were pretty certain to buy something. Nothing makes a more satisfactory or desirable holiday gift for a man or a boy than some article of wearing apparel that is stylish and well made. That this is appreciated is a fact that is evident to any one who visits this store.
